Cookie Policy

The mention of cookies on a website can often confuse people, with many unsure of what they are and why they are required. This policy aims to provide users of our website with information about what cookies are and how they are used on our website.

1. What are Cookies?

A cookie is a small file which is downloaded onto a device, such as your PC, laptop or smart phone, when a user accesses certain websites. This then allows cookies to be sent back to the website on each subsequent visit. As these cookies can gather certain information about an individual, website providers in the EU are required to obtain consent from those visiting their website to place a cookie on their PC.

2. What cookies does PhillipCapital UK use?

Our cookies are here to help. We have placed cookies on your computer already to help us give you the experience you expect. We have divided these cookies into four categories:

(a) Necessary cookies

Without these cookies, also known as session cookies, our website won't work properly. They help you move around the secure areas of the website and do things you've specifically come to the website for, like opening a live or demo account or accessing your MyPhillip area.

(b) Performance cookies

Sometimes known as analytical cookies, these cookies collect anonymous information about how many unique visitors have visited our website or how many different times you may have visited. These cookies can also help us to identify error messages received from different webpages on our site. This information can help us improve our website in order to ensure you have the best possible experience.

(c) Functionality cookies

These cookies are similar to session cookies in the sense that they allow the website, when you fill in a form with your username or other details, to remember your details, so you don't have to type it in each time you come back.

(d) Targeting cookies

When you visit the website, these cookies recognise which parts of the website are interesting to you and to show you pages and adverts we think you'll like based on your activity with us. You can control whether or not these cookies are used, but preventing them may stop us from offering you some services. Some of these cookies are managed by third parties, and you may alternatively use the third parties' own tools to prevent these cookies.

If you have any questions or queries about the cookies we use, please don't hesitate to contact a member of our team.
